THE ANNUAL ADDRESS OF THE MODERATOR FOR THE ASSOCIATION, BY. REV. A. A. SMITH.

Dear Brethren and Delegates: We are blessed to meet in the 58th Annual Session of the Bear Creek Association. We are in debt to God for the privilege through health and strength to be here. I have met it for many years in succession. I have followed it these many years to help put its program over. I came to this body at LaGrange, N. C., right from College, a young chap in my bloom.

My Blessed Master has enabled me not to miss a single session since my connection with it. When I come to it I found the immigration South in its fervor among our people. I denounced it as a great mistake.

The Association went from here the next year to Mount Olive, N. C. Between these dates the Secretary Mr. Calhoun had joined the immigration. At this session I was elected Secretary. I held this position more than 20 years. About 16 years ago I was ushered or elected as its Moderator, which position I have occupied ever since. Since then I have been in its trails, combats and its success. I have remained in all its battles, storms and differences. I have been in its rains and sunshine.

I have contended for its flag to float above the waves and it to march forward towards the hills. I have been here and have seen many fall by the way side and new ones take their places. I have endeavored to lead in many of its achievements.

Among the brethren that I found when I came to this body were Rev. James Wellons, Rev. R. H. Harper, Rev. Washington Winn, Rev. I. Patterson, Rev. G. L. Hood, Rev. C. B. Waters, Rev. E. M. Croom, Rev. J. H. Britt, Rev. R. C. Carroll, Rev. S. M. Jones, Rev. A. B. Williams. Among the laymen were Deacon Thomas Hawkins, Deacon Luke Best, Deacon John Edmundson, Deacon Amos Green, Deacon Ed. Kornegay, Deacon Jacob Smith, Deacon Henry Hand, Deacon L. S. Swinson, Deacon B. S. Sasser, and others.

Dr. E. E. Smith, its first Secretary, had gone to new fields of labor. Brother ministers and delegates, these pioneers have passed away.

But they have fought well and were loyal in their day, under the circumstances and the little training they had. But a new day has dawned upon us. New changes, customs, and new everything. But the religion of man may take on a new form, but the religion of our God stands the same, through the changing ages. True religion never changes. You may say what you will or may, education and intelligence have about swept ignorance and superstition off their feet. This new uprising generation is making different demands upon the leaders and ministers. They are asking for light and genuine instruction. The people are tired of the shadow; they want the substance.

We have talked golden sleeps, long white robes, the crown of stars, the golden streets and seas of glass mingled with fire until it is almost a thing of the past. The time is here when we must tell the people how to live, in order that they may obtain their blessings. The people need to be taught that they must first live right on earth, that is purify their lives, clean their hearts, be converted, be born again and then look to heaven for these attributes. First help them on their feet and then point them to the road that leads them to the Lamb. Let us stop urging people in the church, before they are born of the Spirit of God. Stop telling mourners they are good enough to join the church until they are converted. A church full of sinners is nothing but trouble. There is no such thing as carrying sin and filthy deeds in heaven. I believe it is wrong and a sin for us to try to excite men, women and young folks into the church before they are fit. Preach the gospel and if they will not believe leave the matter with them and God.

You preachers stop tearing up the Bible, jumping all over the floor of the rostrum, hooting to the top of your voice and saying nothing worth hearing and teach the people and preach the gospel. Teach them to live right, to pray with the Spirit and if God says so shout with the Spirit.

Stop having them to believe they have no religion if they don't jump the benches or tear up the seats. Stop taking one another's members in an unlawful way. Follow the Baptist discipline. You know it is wrong, or unlawful, to take each other's members without applying the law. Let the member get his letter or go back to his church and get straightened. Education, intelligence and religion are associated together. They move higher and onward as changes advance. Farming, merchandizing, banking, traveling, handling the mail and industrial pursuits are conducted in a more intelligent way. And the church must advance in its building program and make the best preparation possible, for the accommodation of the people, but it must not slacken in its purity, consecration and spiritual power. We have almost lost our identity as Baptists. What is a Baptist? It is one of a Christian denomination which basis its administration and government on the New Testament only, and believe that Christians should be immersed completely, or put under water in the baptismal ceremony after a public declaration of faith has been made; the denomination described. The Baptists have no creed. An applicant before entering the church, should repent, be converted, voted upon as a fit subject, baptized and admitted to the table.

We have for policy sake almost turned the entire public to our table. Anybody can come to our table, regardless of their mode of baptism. Another erroneous idea has gotten into the church that the minister and deacons are bosses of the church. We have no presiding elders and bishops. We all are on an equality in the church, as to our sphere as to duty. Throw away this nonsense and let the church move on. You can't make anybody have religion, it is a free gift from heaven. Every member should be given credit for service rendered. There is an old story of a prince-bishop who wished to build a church for God. He asked all the people to give and they gave gladly of their time and toil and wealth, and he himself gave more than all. In time the great Abbey was built, and the bishop's heart was filled with pride. He spoke of it as his church and in a central place he sat a statue of himself, and over the arch he had his own name inscribed.

When people from other lands came to visit he wanted them to remember that the noble pile was the work of his hands. One night in a dream, an angel appeared to him and bade him follow. Come, and I will show you some of those who helped you to build your Cathedral, he said.

Out into a country lane they went, and there saw two oxen resting awhile, for they were tired and their work of drawing stones for the cathedral was hard. As they rested, a poor child from a hut nearby came and gave each a wisp of straw. When they had eaten they seemed refreshed and began to strain at the stones again. Seeing this, the prince began to understand that after all he had not built the church alone. Others had done what they could, and without their toil and love, the work would never have been done. And he was filled with sorrow because of his pride and self-conceit. In the morning he sent for the sculptor and bade him make an image of two oxen and a little child with a wisp of straw in his hand. He did so, and when the people came they saw not the prince-bishop, but the oxen and the child. They loved to see them, for some how it helped them to do their daily tasks all the better, and they loved the bishop who had grown so humble. But for him it looks as though the Christian religion might have remained a sort of Jewish sect. He stands in a certain splendid isolation.

But one of the fine things about him is that he sees himself not in isolation, or by himself, but in a great fellowship. He constantly refers to his comrades, gives many lovely and inspiring glimpses of them. He at least escaped the sin of the prince-bishop. Some of them are household names—Barnabas, Silas, Mark, Timothy and Luke. Others are not so well known.

MINUTES OF THE BEAR CREEK MISS. BAPTIST ASSOCIATION 11

They become possible only as these little and often anonymous tributaries flow down hills and mountain side, to lose their identity in larger waters.

The river of Christianity, flowing in fertilizing power in that first century through the ancient world, depended on innumerable tributaries named and unnamed. History has fixed on a few outstanding names, constantly written and preached about, and about which traditions and legends accumulate, while most of their fellow helpers have fallen out of remembrance. Paul has been spoken of as the founder of world-wide Christianity, and who prized the smallest service done by love.

In great achievements and movements there are always many laymen in the movement and often forgotten helpers. History emblazens a few great names on her scroll but fails for the most part to do justice to their fellow-laborers, on whose faithful devotion and endurance almost everything depended.

In the case of recognized rivers, there is one name on the map. While the innumerable streams, licks, burns, rivulets, tricklets, go unnamed and even unmarked, yet rivers are wholly dependent on such contributing waters.

Dr. C. S. Brown in making his annual address before the Lott-Cavey Convention, said preachers ought to preach—ought to stick to their job; ought not be unequally yoked with the world. For they cannot serve God and manum. Says he, we then appeal to our preachers to stop twaddling to the applause of men, but to apply themselves seriously to their heaven-given task. The world is sick of the pulpit monkey, the divinity dude, the clerical good timer, the high-chested structure with Bible in hand. They want and need spiritual advisers whose chief adornment is consecration and whose chief work is soul-saving.

Nothing is more evident than the fact that Christianity is Missionary propaganda, that the Bible is a Missionary book, and that the hero whose life it illustrates was a Missionary, and that the men whom he called to put the program over were missionaries in the strictest sense. As we study the spirit of the great social reformation we are irresistibly driven to the conclusion that Missions were made the center of gravity of the Christian church, and so long as this fact was adhered to, the work prospered with amazing rapidity. Christianity is at its best when unencumbered with worldly cares and adventures. It has been difficult for the leaders to hold to the first and original idea so powerfully set forth in the last great commission.

Attracted by the lucrativeness of other vocations, urged by the selfish desire to gain wealth and popularity, fascinated by the passion to gain worldly power and influence, and justified our young people that are being educated must be provided for in our church program if we expect to hold them in our church. They are meeting with opposition among the old leaders.

In the choir, B. Y. P. U., Sunday School teachers and other positions you may open the way; intelligence is on its march. There are three things that must have the right-of-way work. Education and Christianity by the seductive hero that we are living in a new age, our leaders have made the fatal blunder to attempt to change the center of gravity. It simply cannot be done, and every such attempt reacts in serious disaster to the church.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

I recommend that any church of our group, that receives a member from any Baptist Church without the proper method, should be considered out of Gospel order.

We further recommend: That we shall put in operation as soon as possible a three months Institute each year for ministers, deacons and Christian Workers. I recommend to our Churches seeking a pastor, first consult the Moderator and the leading brethren of the Association.

I recommend that we continue to donate to Shaw and the State Work.
